
14th EIPIN Congress, Strasbourg, Maison Interuniversitaire des Sciences de l'Homme - Alsace (MISHA), 7 April 2013

Christophe Geiger

Associate Professor, Director General and Director of the Research Department, Centre for International Intellectual Property Studies (CEIPI), University of Strasbourg
I. INTRODUCTION: DEFINING THE PROBLEM

Intellectual property rights (IPR) are currently facing a serious crisis of legitimacy in public opinion.

Many reasons for this, some of which are:

- Multiplication, lack of transparency of the functions of IP protection
- Lack of clarity regarding the true beneficiaries of IP protection
- Unclear rhetoric and perception of IP protection
Christophe Geiger
Looking Forward

I. INTRODUCTION: DEFINING THE PROBLEM (continued)

Consequence: A need to give IP law new legitimacy and to restore its social function:

1. Intellectual property needs to be considered no longer as an “absolute” right, but a right with social limits, a right that can give way when required by the general interest (Josef Kohler, Otto von Gierke, Louis Josserand)

2. IP is the product of a type of a “social contract” between the creator and society:
   - IP is a “conditioned” law
   - The grant of rights implies certain duties/ obligations
   - In the interests of society, the right to exclude may be transformed in a right to receive adequate and fair remuneration
II. Human rights – the solution? the Ambiguity of the Constitutional framework at European Level

The European Constitutional Framework for IP:

- Provisions of national Constitutions
- European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR)
- The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the EU (the Charter)
1. Provisions of different national Constitutions

- IP is often not mentioned at all, but is considered as protected under the general right to property

- Functional aspects are not sufficiently expressed

- In some constitutions IP (more often – copyright), if mentioned, is dealt under relatively vague clauses that do not emphasize the link to the creator
2. European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR)

No specific provision on IP in the ECHR. However, the protection is granted through Article 1 of the First Protocol to the ECHR (property):

- The only Article in the Convention that applies to legal persons

- The European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) has gradually attached different IP rights to Article 1 of the First Protocol:

Looking Forward

3. The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the EU: Article 17(2)

“Intellectual property shall be protected”

... You shall not murder, You shall not commit adultery, You shall not steal, You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor, You shall not covet....

Commandment 11?

You shall protect intellectual property!
3. Article 17(2) (continued)

- Who is protected? No reference to the creator

- Rather strange uplifting of an “ordinary” economic right to the constitutional level

- The wording is unclear and ambiguous: there is neither a reference to the public or general interest nor to any other particular objective of the right. Several interpretations have been proposed:

  - IP as an end in itself?

  Or

  - Special mention of IP alongside property as a mark of its specificity?
III. PRACTICAL CONSEQUENCES OF THIS AMBIGUITY: AN “ABSOLUTIST” UNDERSTANDING OF IP

1. Secondary legislation
  “A rigorous, effective system for the protection of copyright and related rights is one of the main ways of ensuring [...] European cultural creativity”

2. CJEU case-law
- Infopaq International A/S v. Danske Dagblades Forening (C-5/ 08) [2009]: even certain parts of sentences may be considered a protected work

3. ECtHR case-law
- the human rights protection extended to the “mere” application for registration of the trademark (Anheuser-Busch Inc. v. Portugal, 11 January 2007)
- corporations invoke their “human right” to property as a justification for a stronger IP protection
IV. THE BETTER OPTION: A SPECIFIC AND BALANCED IP PROVISION INCLUDED IN THE CONSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK

Such examples can be found:

- In International Human Rights Instruments
- In some National Constitutions
- In Quasi-Constitutional Provisions
1. International Human Rights Instruments

Article 27 UDHR:

“(1) Everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits.

(2) Everyone has the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from any scientific, literary or artistic production of which he is the author”.

Article 15 ICESCR follows this language almost verbatim

Both Article 27 UDHR and Article 15 ICESCR offer modern and balanced provisions on IP protection
2. National Constitutions

A number of the more recent constitutions, particularly in Eastern Europe, follow the UDHR logic by safeguarding the creator’s rights under the freedom of arts and sciences (Art. 42 of the Lithuanian Constitution, Art. 54 of the Bulgarian Constitution, Art. 34 of the Czech Charter, Art. 73 of the Polish Constitution, Art. 43 of the Slovak Constitution, etc.):

E.g.: Constitution of the Republic of Lithuania of 1992 (Article 42):

“Culture, science and research, and teaching shall be free.

The State shall support culture and science, and shall take care of the protection of Lithuanian historical, artistic and cultural monuments and other culturally valuable objects.

The law shall protect and defend the spiritual and material interests of an author which are related to scientific, technical, cultural, and artistic work.”
2. National Constitutions (continued)

US Constitution (Article I, Section 8, Clause 8):

“Congress shall have the power [...] to promote the Progress of Science and Useful Arts by securing for limited times to Authors and Inventors the exclusive Right to their respective Writings and Discoveries.”
Christophe Geiger
Looking Forward

3. “Quasi-Constitutional Clauses” (A. Dietz, 2007)

- European harmonisation directives provide for a number of valuable elements of a balanced clause which help to fill the missing link between the protection and its justifications in the general interest (recitals 9 to 12, 14 and 22 of the Directive 2001/29 (InfoSoc))

E.g.: recital 14 of the Directive 2001/29:

“This Directive should seek to promote learning and culture by protecting works and other subject-matter while permitting exceptions or limitations in the public interest for the purpose of education and teaching”.

- WIPO Copyright Treaty 1996 (Preamble):

“[...] Recognizing the need to maintain a balance between the rights of authors and the larger public interest, particularly education, research and access to information [...]”.”
V. WHERE TO FIND SUPPORT FOR A BALANCED IP CLAUSE?

- Charter preparatory documents
- Charter and ECHR provisions (Articles 17(1), 52 and 54 of the Charter and A1P1 of the ECHR)
- Recent CJEU case-law
- Recent ECtHR case-law
- National Constitutional Courts’ decisions in Europe
- Other sources (Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, General Comment No. 17)
1. Support in the Charter preparatory documents

Note from the Praesidium, Explanations Relating to the Complete Text of the Charter, Dok. CHARTE 4487/00 CONVENT 49, pp. 19-20:

- “Protection of intellectual property is explicitly mentioned in paragraph 2 because of its growing importance and Community secondary legislation. The guarantees laid down in paragraph 1 shall apply as appropriate to intellectual property.

- Article 17 is based on Article 1 of the First Protocol to the ECHR and the meaning and scope of Article 17 are the same as those of the right guaranteed under Article 1 of the First Protocol to the ECHR”.

2. Support in the Charter and the ECHR

Article 17(1) of the Charter (Right to Property):

“Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his or her lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his or her possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid in good time for their loss. The use of property may be regulated by law in so far as is necessary for the general interest”

Article 52(1) of the Charter: Principle of Proportionality

Article 54 of the Charter: Prohibition of Abuse of Rights
2. Support in the Charter and the ECHR (continued)

Article 1 of Protocol 1 ECHR (Protection of Property):

“Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one shall be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law.

The preceding provisions shall not, however, in any way impair the right of a State to enforce such laws as it deems necessary to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties”.

- Both Article 17(1) of the Charter and A1P1 of the ECHR consider he right to property as a right having strong social bounds – it should be limited in the general interest.
3. Support in the most recent CJEU jurisprudence

IP is not absolute and must be balanced against the protection of other fundamental rights:

- SABAM v. Netlog NV (C-360/10) [2012] at [41] and [42]
- Scarlet Extended SA v. SABAM (C-70/10) [2012] at [44]
- Promusicae v. Telefonica de Espana SAU (C-275/06) [2008] at [65]

Interpretation of intellectual property within the framework of Article 17(1):

- Martin Luksan v. Petrus van der Let (C-277/10) [2012] at [68]

4. Support in the most recent ECtHR jurisprudence

A conviction for illegally reproducing or publicly communicating copyright-protected material, even for profit-making purposes, is an interference with the right to freedom of expression and information (Article 10(1) ECHR):

- Neij and Sunde Kolmisoppi v. Sweden (dec.), no. 40397/12, 19 February 2013
- Ashby Donald and Others v. France, no. 36769/08, 10 January 2013
5. Support in the national Constitutional Courts’ decisions in Europe

E.g.: German Constitutional Court, the “school book” decision, July 7, 1971 ((1972) IIC 394): the social function of copyright

6. Support in Other Sources

- Recognizing some balanced perspectives on IP is also consistent with the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties (Art. 31(3)(c))
- General Comment No. 17 of the ICESCR (2005): the right under Art. 15(1)(c) safeguards the personal link between authors and their creations and between peoples and is intrinsically linked to the right to take part in cultural life (art. 15, para. 1 (a)), the right to enjoy the benefits of scientific progress and its applications (art. 15, para. 1 (b)), and the freedom indispensable for scientific research and creative activity (art. 15, para. 3)
VI. SOLUTION:

To introduce in the Charter of fundamental rights of the EU a constitutional clause on IP modelled on international, national constitutional and quasi-constitutional provisions reflecting the modern concepts of social and cultural policy in Europe.

TWO OPTIONS ARE PROPOSED:

- The “classical” option: introduction of an IP provision in the framework of Property

- The innovative/modern option: introduction of an IP provision in the framework of Freedom of Arts and Sciences
VI. SOLUTION (continued)

Alternative I: Protection in the framework of property: Revision of Article 17 (Right to property)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Current wording</th>
<th>Suggested wording</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his or her lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his or her possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid in good time for their loss. The use of property may be regulated by law in so far as is necessary for the general interest.</td>
<td>1. Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his or her lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his or her possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid in good time for their loss. The use of property may be regulated by law in so far as is necessary for the general interest.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Intellectual property shall be protected.</td>
<td>2. In order to promote the progress of science, creativity, learning and culture, everyone shall have the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from his scientific, literary or artistic production. The guarantees laid down in paragraph 1 apply.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Christophe Geiger
Looking Forward

VI. SOLUTION (continued)

ART. 17 (2) OF THE EU CHARTER:

“In order to promote the progress of science, creativity, learning and culture, everyone shall have the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from his scientific, literary or artistic production. The guarantees laid down in paragraph 1 apply”.
VI. SOLUTION (continued)

Alternative II: Protection in the framework of Freedom of Arts and Sciences: Revision of Article 13 of the Charter (Freedom of Arts and Sciences)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Current Clause</th>
<th>Suggested Clause</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The arts and scientific research shall be free of constraint. Academic freedom shall be respected.</td>
<td>1. Everyone has the right to benefit from the achievements of scientific progress, to enjoy the arts and to participate in the cultural life of the community.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>2. Creators of scientific, literary or artistic production shall have the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from their creative activity. The rights granted are regulated by law in so far as is necessary to guarantee the rights in the preceding paragraph and the general interest.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
VI. SOLUTION (continued)

ART. 13 OF THE EU CHARTER

becomes:

1. Everyone has the right to benefit from the achievements of scientific progress, to enjoy the arts and to participate in the cultural life of the community.

2. Creators of scientific, literary or artistic production shall have the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from their creative activity. The rights granted are regulated by law in so far as is necessary to guarantee the rights in the preceding paragraph and the general interest.
VI. SOLUTION (continued)

Advantages of protecting IP under Article 13:

- Such protection is in line with Article 27 UDHR, Article 15 ICESCR and a number of national constitutions in Europe as it places IP in the category of cultural rights

- The cultural right status of IP makes its social function more visible

- Balances IP against human dignity and freedom of expression

Note from the Praesidium, Explanations Relating to the Complete Text of the Charter, Dok. CHARTE 4487/00 CONVENT 49:

“This right is deduced primarily from the right to freedom of thought and expression. It is to be exercised having regard to Article 1 (Human Dignity) and may be subject to the limitations authorized by Article 10 of the ECHR“.